VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

Violence against women is an urgent public health problem which has devastating consequences for women, children, and families. The incidents of violence involving women have been increasing at an alarming rate. Approximately 17.7 million American women have been raped or been a victim of attempted rape during their lifetimes. More than half of all American women have been physically assaulted.

DHHS is part of a comprehensive approach by the federal government to fight violence against women. Initiatives at DHHS include: (1) launching a national toll-free domestic violence hotline (1-800-799-SAFE), (2) increasing the funding of grants to states for battered women's shelters, (3) providing grants to states for rape prevention and education programs, and (4) coordinating community responses to prevent intimate partner violence.

COGNITIVE BEHAVIOR THERAPY FOR MENTAL DISORDERS

Cognitive behavior therapy (CBT) is a form of treatment based on the belief that the way a person thinks about an event determines in part how he or she responds to the event, both in terms of feelings and behavior. The goal of CBT is to help the patient learn to identify and correct erroneous beliefs and systematic distortions in information processing in order to reduce distress and increase efforts to cope. The literature indicates that CBT is effective in the treatment of depression, panic disorder, generalized anxiety disorder and bulimia nervosa. It has emerged as the treatment of choice for these disorders often proving to be more effective than alternative therapies and typically longer lasting. Research indicates that results are not so clear with personality and impulse control disorders but initial findings are promising. There are also indications that CBT may be of use in the treatment of schizophrenia and other psychotic disorders largely as an adjunct to medications. NIMH is currently funding research on the effectiveness of CBT in the treatment of a variety of mental disorders.

HEPATITIS C

Nearly 4 million people in the United States and more than 100 million people worldwide are infected with the hepatitis C virus (HCV). Most of these people have no symptoms, although they transmit this blood-borne virus to others. Hepatitis C has emerged as a major cause of chronic liver disease worldwide. The literature suggests that the rate of death from hepatitis C is increasing and may soon surpass the number of deaths from AIDS. Most of the people who contract HCV infection become persistently infected. The National Center for Health Statistics' National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey contains data on HCV infection.

METHAMPHETAMINE ABUSE AND ADDICTION

Methamphetamine is an addictive stimulant which affects the central nervous system. It is commonly known as "speed," "meth," and "chalk". The literature indicates that methamphetamine use is on the rise. Between the first and second halves of 1996, there was a 71% increase in the number of methamphetamine-related visits to the emergency room in twenty one metropolitan areas. Research indicates that, like cocaine, methamphetamine stimulates excess release of dopamine which in turn causes feelings of euphoria by the user. Long-term effects of methamphetamine use can include: dependence and addiction psychosis, stroke and weight loss. NIDA is funding research to study the effects that methamphetamine has on the brain as well as what treatments are effective for methamphetamine abusers.

ORGAN DONATION

Today, a critical shortage of donor organs is an obstacle facing donor programs worldwide. The Division of Transplantation, a program of the Health Resources and Services Administration, maintains working relationships with professional organizations in the field of transplantation and fosters relationships with public and private organizations to promote the concept of organ donation. Current literature discusses socio-economic barriers to organ donation, ethics, presumed-consent, the role of hospitals, geographic distribution, and financial incentives to increase donation.

RACIAL DIFFERENCES IN CIGARETTE SMOKING

More than 1.1 billion people smoke tobacco worldwide. The literature indicates that African Americans smoke fewer cigarettes than Caucasian Americans but inhale more deeply and are more likely to select mentholated brands. These patterns lead to higher net indexes of smoke exposure and the potential for greater physical dependence. Research indicates that African American cigarette smokers take in 30 percent more nicotine per cigarette than Caucasian smokers; tend to suffer more from tobacco-related disease; and have more trouble stopping. AHCPR has recently funded research in this area.

GUIDE TO LIBRARY RESOURCES

THE DIRECTORY OF NURSING HOMES. Baltimore, MD, HCIA Inc., 1998,
REF-ASSN WX 22AA1/D6274

The Directory of Nursing Homes is an annual publication which lists more than 16,500 nursing homes in the United States. Information is compiled by questionnaire and telephone follow-up. The directory is arranged alphabetically by state and within each state by city. Within each city, facilities are arranged alphabetically by name. Each entry contains:

- name of facility
- address
- names of key staff members
- telephone
- fax number
- number and type of staff

In addition, entries may include any or all of the following:

- facility type
- payer mix
- owner type
- management company
- admission requirements
- special facilities and activities
- number of beds
- state license information
- name of owner
- other services offered
- referral requirements
- affiliations

STATE STAFF DIRECTORY. Alexandria, VA, CQ Staff Directories, Inc.,
1998. REF-DIR JK 2403/S7977

The State Staff Directory is updated three times a year and contains information on over 40,000 key executives and staff in the executive and legislative branches of state governments. It contains brief information about each state including: demographics, budget, number of government employees, state officials, useful phone numbers and web addresses. This source is arranged into four sections which include:

- State by state listing of executives and staff of state governments
- Biographies of key state employees
- Index of committees in each state
- Name index
