CHILDREN AND LEAD POISONING

Lead poisoning in children is a preventable environmental health problem. Yet, one out of every 20 children in the U.S. has some degree of lead poisoning. The most common sources of lead exposure for children are paint, dust, and soil. Extended exposure to lead can cause developmental delays, learning disabilities, behavioral problems, and kidney damage. NCHS has published data on lead exposure in Healthy People 2010.

COMMUNITY SERVICES IN THE ADMINISTRATION FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES (ACF)

The Office of Community Services, ACF functions in partnership with states, communities, and other agencies to provide a range of human and economic development services and activities to improve the causes and characteristics of poverty. The goal of these services is to increase the capacity of individuals and families to become self-sufficient, to revitalize communities, and to build the stability and capacity of children, youth, and families.

MEDICATION ERRORS IN HOSPITALIZED CHILDREN

A medication error is defined as a discrepancy between what a physician orders and what is reported to occur. AHRQ recently funded a study wherein hospitalized children were reported to have three times the rate of potential adverse drug events as did hospitalized adults.

MENTALLY ILL OFFENDERS

There are approximately 670,000 mentally ill individuals admitted to U.S. jails each year. This is approximately 8 times the number of patients admitted to state mental facilities. Persons with mental illness are incarcerated at rates that are disproportionately high in comparison to the rates of incarceration for the general population. Factors that have contributed to this include deinstitutionalization, higher standards for involuntary commitment, and policies that focus on punishment rather than on rehabilitation. CMHS, SAMHSA is funding a study to evaluate innovative jail diversion programs for adults who are mentally ill.

TEEN USE OF STEROIDS

Results from the 26th annual Monitoring the Future study indicate that the use of steroids has risen among 10th graders. The survey found that steroid use rose from 1.7 percent in 1999 to 2.2 percent in 2000. Most steroid use was reported by teenage males. Concerns about body image and athletic performance lead adolescents to steroid use despite the serious side-effects caused by the substances. NIDA has established a web site to educate youth about the dangers of steroids. This site can be found at steroidabuse.org or drugabuse.gov.
